ACRYLIC BOXED SETS

There are many manufacturers on the market. Sets contain an assortment of colors that are acceptable although you may get colors you never use. Buy moderately priced paint. Cheap paint will be harder to use and give results that are disappointing. A small Intro set of Daler-Rowney acrylics runs about $24.00 online, without the shipping. Try Soho brand, which is available from Jerry's Artarama, online. Most of the colors listed are in the set of 24 colors, which is often on sale for $19.99!

There is a dizzying array of acrylic paints on the market. Not only do different manufacturers have their own brands, each one has different types of paint. One of the leaders in the acrylic paint industry is Golden, and their website is very informative about the use of their paints. There are hundreds of forums and websites about acrylic paints online. Other manufacturers are Dick Blick, Liquitex, Galleria, DaVinci, Grumbacher, Daler-Rowney, Utrecht, SoHo, Winsor Newton and the higher priced Old Holland. Acrylic painters have a wide assortment of mediums and gels to add to their paint for texture effects and to control drying time and acrylic paint itself is sold as heavy body, fluid, "Open Acrylic" to retard drying time, and so on to create a confusing assortment of choices.

Brushes: Both long handle and short handle brushes may be used, depending on the type of painting. Generally long handled brushes are for easel work, short handles are for works that lie flat on a table or drawing board. To begin, try an acrylic assortment of brushes. Both bristle and synthetic brushes are used. Stay away from sable brushes, as acrylic paint is too hard on them. Cheap brushes will annoy with hairs in the paint, while expensive brushes are easily damaged.

Palettes

Disposables, (try to get Richeson Grey paper palettes) lidded varieties, parchment rolls, aluminum foil, glass plates and trays, plastic dinner plates, butcher trays, ice cube trays, and new grey plastic palettes from online retailers.

Miscellaneous

Soft lead pencil, charcoal,
 Kneaded eraser
 Gum and/or Pink Pearl
 Jars for water
 Rags or Paper towels

Tape (drafting tape works better than masking tape)
 Ruler or straight edge
 X-Acto Knife or razor blades
 Drawing board or foam board to hold your paper or upright easel either free standing or tabletop

Supports

Hot or cold pressed watercolor paper, acrylic papers sold in tablet form, stretched canvas, canvas panels, gesso boards and other specially prepared boards available in art stores. Acrylics may be painted on numerous surfaces and supports!
